Tuml is the Yiddish word meaning “noise;” a balalaika is a fretted Russian folk instrument with a triangular body which is somewhat similar to a mandolin. This is a riddle song (similar to the English “I Gave My Love a Cherry”), in which a young man looks for a smart woman to marry — and finds one. Translation adapted from Wikipedia:

1 (Narrator): A young lad stands and thinks, thinks and thinks the whole night: whom to choose and not to shame?
Chorus: Tumbala, tumbala, tumbalalaika, strum the balalaika, may we be happy!

2 (He): Maiden, I want to ask you: What can grow without rain? What can burn and never end? What can yearn, crying without tears?

3 (She): Foolish boy, why do you have to ask? A stone can grow without rain; love can burn and never end; and a heart can yearn, crying without tears.

4 (He): What is higher than a house? What is swifter than a mouse? What is deeper than a well? What is more bitter than gall?

5 (She): A chimney is higher than a house; a cat is swifter than a mouse; the Torah is deeper than a well; and death is more bitter than gall.
